Importance of Family

Next month we greet Pope Francis when he comes to Ireland for the World Meeting of Families. It is important we remind ourselves he is coming to remind us that a healthy society is founded on healthy families and communities. Sadly we are aware they are both challenged now to retain their vitally important positions in Irish Society.

We are now called on to reflect on our own families - how healthy are they, what values shape them. Most people agree these are difficult times for family and community, for faith and for the Church in trying to communicate the Christian Message.

In these times our meaning and values come from the world of media, advertising, commercial interests, corporate.

When given the opportunity to reflect during our parenting programmes earlier in the year it became clear that many parents are not satisfied with the values of the consumerist/materialist culture. For many there is a search for something deeper, for stillness, for mystery, inwardness, a hunger to connect, to belong. This search needs community. This search in fact is part of most people's lives now.

In our preparation for this special occasion of the Meeting of World Families in Dublin and the Pope's visit we will focus on the importance of family for all of us.

A special outdoor Mass here in our community is planned to coincide with these events.
